Thank you to our reviewers!

Mucosal Immunology (2019) 12:293–295; <https://doi.org/10.1038/s41385-019-0142-8>

Editor-in-chief

The editors at Mucosal Immunology would like to extend their heartfelt thanks to those who have provided their time and energy to review manuscripts for them over the 2018 calendar year. As you are well aware, we take the review process very seriously, and your concerted efforts to provide concise, accurate, and thoughtful reviews benefitted not only the quality of the articles we publish, but also the authors, who gained insight and guidance to make their manuscript more convincing and impactful. Furthermore, your valuable feedback and discussions of contested reviews (of which there were few) were, and are invaluable in developing new ideas to improve what will always be an imperfect process. In this regard, in the near future you will see meaningful changes in our on-line review forms, and we are developing better resources to guide less experienced reviewers. We should also celebrate the fact of 626 completed reviews in 2018, the average time from reviewer assignment to completion was 14 days, a milestone that we have been seeking to achieve. Below is a list of all of you who completed at least one review, and we give special recognition (*) to those who provided three or more. As always, we are open to your thoughts on ways to improve our review process, and welcome ideas for exciting new areas we should address with reviews and commentaries as we move forward into our twelfth year in press!
